MCW Statement on Federal Work Study

The Medical College of Wisconsin (MCW) is a graduate institution of higher education offering accredited terminal degree programs in health science including Doctor of Medicine, Doctor of Pharmacy and PhD and MS programs in Biomedical Sciences, among others. MCW does not offer any undergraduate programs of study. MCW's health science programs are designed as full-time curriculum and many are accelerated, and students must devote their full-time effort to their studies. As a result, MCW does not participate in the federal work study program. Additionally, only non-need based federal aid programs are available to students which include the Federal Direct Unsubsidized and the Federal Direct Grad PLUS loan programs.

Students eligible for the federal aid programs can borrow funds up to the cost of attendance for living expenses. This includes funds for housing, food, transportation, personal, etc. Current cost of attendance allowances are posted on mcw.edu under Financial Aid.
