How to quit smoking

On Nov. 16, the Medical College of Wisconsin, along with the other organizations on the Milwaukee Regional Medical Center campus, will be implementing a completely smoke/tobacco free environment policy for faculty, staff, students, patients, and visitors. Beginning that day, the use of all tobacco products will be prohibited indoors and outdoors on all on-campus and off-campus properties owned or leased by the College.

The following information was obtained from the American Cancer Society on key elements of a successful smoking cessation plan. It is being shared to educate College employees on these topics.

Smokers often say, "Don't tell me why to quit, tell me how." There is no one right way to quit, but here are some key elements in quitting smoking successfully. These four factors are crucial:

- Making the decision to quit
- Setting a quit date and choosing a quit plan
- Dealing with withdrawal
- Staying tobacco free (maintenance)

Making the decision to quit

The decision to quit tobacco use is one that only you can make. Others may want you to quit, but the real commitment must come from you. Researchers have looked into how and why people stop tobacco use. They have some ideas, or models, of how this happens.

The health belief model says that you will be more likely to stop tobacco use if you:

- Believe that you could get a tobacco-related disease and this worries you
- Believe that you can make an honest attempt at quitting
- Believe that the benefits of quitting outweigh the benefits of continuing tobacco use
- Know of someone who has had health problems as a result of their tobacco use
- Do any of these apply to you?

The stages of change model identifies the stages that you go through when you make a change in behavior. Here are the stages as they apply to quitting tobacco use:

- Pre-contemplation: At this stage, the tobacco user is not thinking seriously about quitting right now.
- Contemplation: The tobacco user is actively thinking about quitting but is not quite ready to make a serious attempt yet. This person may say, "Yes, I'm ready to quit, but the stress at work is too much, or I don't want to gain weight, or I'm not sure if I can do it."
- Preparation: Tobacco users in the preparation stage seriously intend to quit in the next month and often have tried to quit in the past 12 months. They usually have a plan.
- Action: This is the first six months when the user is actively quitting.
Maintenance: This is the period of six months to five years after quitting when the ex-user is aware of the danger of relapse and takes steps to avoid it.

Where do you fit in this model? If you are thinking about quitting, setting a date and deciding on a plan will move you into the preparation stage, the best place to start.

Setting a quit date and deciding on a plan

Once you've made a decision to quit, you're ready to pick a quit date. This is a very important step. Pick a specific day within the next month as your "quit day." Picking a date too far in the future allows you time to rationalize and change your mind, but do give yourself enough time to prepare and come up with a plan.

You might choose a date that has a special meaning like a birthday or anniversary, or the date of the Great American Smokeout (third Thursday in November each year). Or you may want to simply pick a random date. Circle the date on your calendar. Make a strong, personal commitment to quit on that day.

There is no one right way to quit. Most tobacco users prefer to quit "cold turkey" - that is, abruptly and totally. They use tobacco until their quit day and then stop all at once, or they may cut down on tobacco for a week or two before their quit day. Another way involves cutting down on the number of times tobacco is used each day. With this method, you gradually reduce the amount of nicotine in your body. While it sounds logical to cut down in order to quit gradually, in practice this method is difficult.

Quitting tobacco is a lot like losing weight; it takes a strong commitment over a long period of time. Users may wish there was a magic bullet - a pill or method that would made quitting painless and easy – but that is not the case. Nicotine substitutes can help reduce withdrawal symptoms, but they are most effective when used as part of a stop tobacco use plan that addresses both the physical and psychological components of quitting.

Here are some steps to help you prepare for your quit day:

- Pick the date and mark it on your calendar.
- Tell friends and family about your quit day.
- Get rid of all the cigarettes and ashtrays in your home, care and place of work.
- Stock up on oral substitutes - sugarless gum, carrot sticks, and/or hard candy.
- Decide on a plan. Will you use nicotine replacement therapies or other medications? Will you attend a class? If so, sign up now.
- Practice saying, "No thank you, I don't smoke."
- Set up a support system. This could be a group class, Nicotine Anonymous, or a friend or family member who has successfully quit and is willing to help you.
- Ask them not to smoke around you or leave cigarettes out where you can see them. Think back to your past attempts to quit. Try to analyze what worked and what did not work for you.
Successful quitting is a matter of planning and commitment, not luck. Decide now on your own plan. Some possibilities include using the nicotine patch or gum, joining a tobacco cessation class, going to Nicotine Anonymous meetings, or using self-help materials such as books and pamphlets. For the best chance in success, your plan should include one or more of these options.

On your quit day, follow these suggestions:
- Do not smoke. This means at all - not even one puff.
- Keep active - try walking, exercising, or doing other activities or hobbies.
- Drink lots of water and juices.
- Begin using nicotine replacement if that is your choice.
- Attend stop smoking class or start following a self-help plan.
- Avoid situations where the urge to smoke is strong.
- Reduce or avoid alcohol.
- Think about changing your routine. Use a different route to work. Drink tea instead of coffee. Eat breakfast in a different place or eat different foods.

Dealing with withdrawal
Withdrawal from nicotine has two parts - the physical and the psychological. The physical symptoms, while annoying, are not life threatening. Nicotine replacement can help reduce many of these physical symptoms. But most users find that the bigger challenge is the mental part of quitting.

If you have been smoking for any length of time, smoking has become linked with nearly everything you do - waking up in the morning, eating, reading, watching TV, and drinking coffee, for example. It will take time to "un-link" smoking from these activities. That is why, even if you are using a nicotine replacement, you may still have strong urges to smoke.

One way to overcome these urges or cravings is to recognize rationalizations as they come up. A rationalization is a mistaken belief that seems to make sense at the time but is not based on facts. If you have tried to quit before, you will probably recognize many of these common rationalizations:
- I'll just use it to get through this rough spot.
- Today is not a good day; I'll quit tomorrow.
- It's my only vice.
- How bad is tobacco, really? Uncle Harry chewed all his life and he lived to be over 90.
- You've got to die from something.
- Life is no fun without smoking.

You probably can add more to the list. As you go through the first few days without tobacco, write down any rationalizations as they come up and recognize them for what they are: messages that can trap you into going back to using tobacco. Use the ideas below to help you keep your commitment to quitting:
• Avoid people and places where you are tempted to smoke. Later on you will be able to handle these with more confidence.
• Alter your habits. Switch to juices or water instead of alcohol or coffee. Take a different route to work. Take a brisk walk instead of a coffee break.
• Alternatives: Use oral substitutes such as sugarless gum or hard candy, raw vegetables such as carrot sticks, or sunflower seeds.
• Activities: Do something to reduce your stress. Exercise or do hobbies that keep your hands busy, such as needlework or woodworking, which can help distract you from the urge to smoke. Take a hot bath, exercise, read a book.
• Deep breathing: When you were smoking, you breathed deeply as you inhaled the smoke. When the urge strikes you, breathe deeply and picture you lungs filling with fresh, clean air. Remind yourself of your reasons for quitting and the benefits you'll gain as an ex-smoker.
• Delay: If you feel that you are about to light up, delay. Tell yourself you must wait at least 10 minutes. Often this simple trick will allow you to move beyond the strong urge to smoke.

What you're doing is not easy, so you deserve a reward. Put the money you would have spent on tobacco in a jar every day and then buy yourself a weekly treat. Buy a magazine, book, music, go out to eat, take a class to learn a new hobby. Or save money for a major purchase or vacation. You can also reward yourself in a healthy way, invest the money you save in a health club membership or fitness classes.

Staying tobacco-free (maintenance)
Remember the quotation by Mark Twain, "Quitting smoking is easy. I've done it a thousand times." Maybe you, too, have quit many times before. So you know that staying quit is the final, and most important, stage of the process. You can use the same methods to stay quit as you did to help you through withdrawal. Think ahead to those times when you may be tempted to smoke, and plan on how you will use alternatives and activities to cope with these situations.

More dangerous, perhaps, are the unexpected strong desires to smoke that occur sometimes months (or even years) after you've quit. To get through these without relapse, try the following:
  • Review your reasons for quitting and think of all the benefits to your health, your finances and your family.
  • Remind yourself that there is no such thing as just one cigarette - or even one puff.
  • Ride out the desire. It will go away, but do not fool yourself into thinking you can have just one.
  • Avoid alcohol. Drinking lowers your chance of success.
  • If you are worried about gaining weight, put some energy into eating a healthy diet and staying active with exercise.
What if you smoke? The difference between a slip and a relapse is within your control. You can use the slip as an excuse to go back to smoking, or you can look at what went wrong and renew your commitment to staying off smoking for good.

Even if you do relapse, try not to get too discouraged. Very few people are able to quit for good on the first attempt. In fact, it takes most people several attempts before quitting for good. What's important is figuring out what helped you in your attempt to quit and what worked against you. You can then use this information to make a stronger attempt at quitting the next time.

In addition to the American Cancer Society, other sources of patient information and support include:

American Cancer Society
Telephone: 1-800-ACS-2345 (1-800-227-2345)
Internet address: www.cancer.org

American Heart Association & American Stroke Association
Telephone: 1-800-AHA-USA-1 or 1-800-242-8721
Telephone: 1-888-4-STROKE or 1-888-478-7653
Internet address: www.amhrt.org
Internet address: www.strokeassociation.org

American Lung Association
Telephone: 1-800-LUNG-USA or 1-800-548-8252
Internet address: www.lungusa.org

Centers for Disease Control and Prevention
Office of Smoking & Health
Telephone: 1-800-CDC-INFO or 1-800-232-6237
Internet address: www.cdc.gov/tobacco

National Cancer Institute
Cancer Information Service
Telephone: 1-800-4-CANCER or 1-800-422-6237
Internet address: www.cancer.gov

Nicotine Anonymous
Telephone: 1-415-750-0328
Internet address: www.nicotine-anonymous.org

Smokefree.gov
(Online materials, including info on state telephone-based programs)
Telephone: 1-800-QUITNOW or 1-800-784-8669
Internet address: www.smokefree.gov
Smoking Cessation Leadership Center
Telephone: 1-800-QUITNOW or 1-800-784-8669
Internet address: http://smokingcessationleadership.ucsf.edu/