Pioneering Pathways to a Healthier World

In academic medicine, new knowledge drives medicine and science to build a healthier world.

The Medical College of Wisconsin comprises a diverse group of thought leaders collaborating to build a healthier world. At the core of everything we do is academic medicine, which brings together scientists, clinicians, students and community members to solve challenges in health and society. Every study we conduct, every patient we see, leads to new learning and a continuous cycle of life-changing knowledge.

Transforming Health Sciences Education

MCW physicians, pharmacists and other healthcare professionals care for patients while teaching the next generation of healthcare providers. Scientists conduct research while working side by side with graduate students. Our faculty members teach and mentor to help advance students’ careers and to pass along the latest knowledge to tomorrow’s practitioners. We strive for ever-increasing excellence in our models of teaching, and our innovative approach to health sciences education is improving access to healthcare where it is needed most.

Advancing Innovation

Our scientists lead biomedical and population health advancements through laboratory research, clinical trials and community-engaged research. These studies are conducted in collaboration with local, national and global thought leaders and innovators. Research drives new knowledge that can change everything, including how we define, diagnose, treat and prevent disease, as well as how we train the next generation to push beyond the boundaries of what is possible.
Harnessing the Power of Academic Medicine

MCW physicians and practitioners rewrite the stories of patients and families with the latest treatment options, cutting-edge clinical trials and collaborative, team-based care. Our clinicians work with teams of leading scientists to pioneer new treatments, inspire and educate the next generation of doctors and contribute to groundbreaking research. This is the power of academic medicine, harnessed to treat the most complex conditions and advance the health of entire communities.
