Commencement

Master of Science in Anesthesia

Friday, December 19, 2025

To our graduates:

Could you imagine what this day would look and feel like 28 months ago? Just like the patients we care for, you may have found yourself confused and overwhelmed by a process you didn't fully understand as you entered the program. Perhaps at some point you asked to be woken up when it was over. But just as we advocate for our patients you have also had various advocates and mentors help guide you towards success. While you may have many emotions as you center your thoughts on the various accomplishments and challenges you faced throughout your journey, I hope you all stand here today proud of having completed such a rigorous program and humbled by the fortune to experience such a formative opportunity.

Nearly three years ago, you committed to join MCW's Master of Science in Anesthesia program as our graduating Class of 2025—beginning your journey to become a Certified Anesthesiologist Assistant. This will certainly be a time you will never forget, many of your fellow CAA's still regularly think about their own time in training. The opportunities and experiences involved in learning our craft are transformative. Unlike our patients, you remained conscious throughout them all. The journey, with all the deeply impactful learning experiences, likely revealed talents you were unaware you possessed. Reflect on those times where you broke through personal boundaries and limits that seemed insurmountable. Remember them as you enter this challenging field and know you are prepared to handle the worst situations our patients may experience as you provide their vigilant care. Think about how you have skillfully guided hundreds of patients through transitions of consciousness and sensation. You have administered thousands of medications with precision and prudence. You have listened (and even seen) to a beating heart. You have fine-tuned your senses to pick up on the subtle changes that can occur to the body during surgery. These are just simple examples of the vast experiences used to describe what it means to be a CAA. Only your personal journey provides impactful context.

During your time at MCW, you likely held a patient's hand to allay their fear and assured them you will be with them until they are safely through the surgery. You may have carried a precious child to the operating room and returned them to anxiously waiting and ultimately relieved parents. While our patients are typically the highlight of our focus, today the spotlight shines brightly on you. This is a time to celebrate! Your faculty, friends, and family bear witness to your accomplishments. Today, you join our profession, not only as Certified Anesthesiologist Assistants, but as distinguished graduates of the Medical College of Wisconsin. Your future work now becomes our shared story. We look forward to seeing your expertise continue to grow and the impact it will have on the communities you serve.

Sincerely,

Kyle Goham, MHSc, CAA

Degree Awarded

Master of Science in Anesthesia (MSA)

The MSA Program provides high quality education through challenging curriculum and comprehensive clinical teaching. MCW prepares safe and competent providers for the surgical patient.

MCW's MSA program is the first in the state to train anesthesiologist assistants, who will work under the direction of leading physician anesthesiologists after graduation. The curriculum immerses students in all areas of anesthesia knowledge throughout the 28-month program, transforming the student into an expert clinician.

Based at MCW's Milwaukee campus, the MSA program at MCW teaches to the highest level of professionalism. As part of MCW's Department of Anesthesiology, our students learn at top academic medical centers.
